Profile

Jon Webb was born and raised in England where he studied photography at Berkshire College of Art & Design. Upon graduating Jon was approached by the prestigious Holborn Studios, London to become a photographic assistant where he spent the next 2 years honing his craft and progressing from assistant to photographer.

In 1988 Jon decided to broaden his horizons and began travelling. He eventually settled in Melbourne, Australia where he quickly found work as a freelance photographer and began building his own studios, Decent Exposure. Over the years DE has grown to house some of Australia's finest photographers and consistently produces work of an outstanding quality.

Whilst building his photographic business, an opportunity arose to act as D.O.P. on a short film in 2000 which encouraged Jon to pursue his passion for film making and in 2001 he shot the award winning documentary "Save your Legs". With his unique style incorporating his photographic stills background, Jon has since shot TVC's, Short & Feature Films, Videos and Documentaries.
