RESEARCH

Erin is a Doctor of Creative Industries, graduating from Queensland University of Technology in 2018. Her research focused on the role of the costumer design in characterisation for film and television. Erin developed a philosophy for the practice of costume design based on the triangulation of embodiment of character, voice of the designer and collaboration.

In 2017 Erin was awarded a Churchill Fellowship. The fellowship took her on a 7 week professional development journey, working with costume designers and production companies around the world to expand her own design practice and networks and share those findings with the film and TV community on return to Australia.

In 2010 Erin commenced fieldwork with a research project in the Sultanate of Oman, Interweavings. (www.interweavings.com). An ethnographic study of women's traditional dress and regional identity. The project was run through Sohar University Sultanate of Oman Department of Humanities and the Project Manager was Dr Thomas Roche. This project is on going.
